Work as a polling official

The Australian Electoral Commission (AEC) is looking for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people to take advantage of job opportunities at election time.

The AEC employs around 80,000 people at more than 7,000 polling places across Australia to help make the federal election run smoothly.

There are a range of temporary roles available on election day and throughout the election period. Payment depends on the position and hours worked.

If you're energetic, good with people, have an eye for detail and can keep your cool when there's a lot going on, this might be the job for you.

It's a great opportunity to be part of one of the biggest community events in Australia and to help your community to have a say in Australia's future.

To apply, simply visit the AEC website and fill out an Expression of Interest form to register your interest. You will need to provide details of your skills, knowledge and experience so we can consider what job you may be suitable for. Suitable training and support is provided depending on the position you are offered.

For further advice or support with the application process, visit our website at www.aec.gov.au/Indigenous or contact an AEC Indigenous Community Engagement Officer in your state or territory.
